

TROLLEY CARS RUN TO HOUNSLOW HEATH

AND LONDONERS ARE SLOW IN GETTING OUT OF THE WAY.

INDIANAPOLIS MAN'S THRILLS

It was Dreadful to See the Many Narrow Escapes—Other London Observations.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, August 28.—Hounslow Heath, since one of the chosen fields for the predatory operations of the romantic highwayman, who took from the rich to give to the poor—himself being generally "the poor," no doubt—has degenerated even more than has Hampstead Heath, a similar area to the northeast of it. You must go to Hounslow now by overhead trolley without the least fear of being held up by anybody except the conductor, who is content to extract four pence from your purse for the benefit of a soulless corporation.

The road on the way passes through Gunnersbury; Chiswick, where Fox and Channing died; Strand-on-Green, the last home of Joe Miller, the inventor of the indestructible joke; Brentford, where away back when year dates were quite small, the English or Saxons had a little affair with the Danes, and later there was a skirmish between Prince Rupert and the Parliamentarians, in which, I believe, Rupert got the decision; Kew, interesting and several other places that I can't recall or failed to distinguish, as the whole line of road is solidly built up and there is no mark to tell where one town leaves off and another begins.

London is Growing.

There is considerable atmosphere of slumness about the route, though parts of it are very rarely suburban, with large areas offering for sale new and charming "detached" (one house standing alone) and "semi-detached" (double houses) villas at prices and terms to suit purchasers in almost any circumstances that permit him to make the slightest pretense of prosperity. Evidently London is still growing, and I shouldn't be surprised if someday it covered Great Britain as New York covers Manhattan.

The trolley to Hounslow runs from Shepherd's Bush—seven miles and a half—which may be reached from the heart of London by the "tuppenny tube." From Shepherd's Bush also run trolley lines to Kew, Twickenham, Ealing, Acton, Southall and a few other places. The cars, which are the usual two-story affairs peculiar to this part of the world, all look very new and bright, and are not distinguished in the customary way with advertisements. Perhaps the advertisements will come later, as the lines are all rather new, two of them, indeed—Wickham and Hounslow—having been opened within the last ten days.

I suppose it is too early to compile mortality statistics to have been compiled here, but I think that the outlook for high figures is promising unless the Britishers accelerate their rather leisurely motions. When I started out on the Hounslow car, I took an upstairs front seat where I had as good a view of the track ahead as the motorman had; after nearly having heart disease several times at people's narrow escapes from being run over, I moved back where I couldn't see so much.

Innocent of Trolley Car Knowledge.

These people seem to have no idea of what a trolley can do in the way of speed, and though these cars do not run fast, as compared with our own, they are a good deal faster than the "buses" that the street crossers are accustomed to dodge. When people are strolling across the tracks in a leisurely manner they seem surprised, but not startled, at the way the motorman beats his gong and scowls—sometimes aloud—as he shuts off the current and twists up the brake.

I didn't see anybody killed, but I saw enough to convince me that if I were going to be a motorman in England I should rather work on the underground "tuppenny tube" where nobody crosses the tracks and where slow-moving wagons do not block the way. And they do block the trolley way most exasperatingly. In some places the street is so narrow that a wagon has to drive over on the wrong side of the street, but in the right side in England, you know—in order that the car may pass it.

Visitor's Impression of Climate.

One of the Indian visitors, who has now returned to his home, has written some of his impressions to a friend here, who kindly furnished some of the copy to the Evening Star. The printed portion of the letter, which seems to indicate that the gentleman belongs to the class known as "baboon," is as follows:

While I shall ever keep freshly in my mind the memory of your princely hospitality, my eyes are suffused with lachrymose drops at thought of continued enforcement of your residence in terribly aquatic climate. Having viewed for some weeks English "dry season," I am surprised with amazement, and mentally urged to wonder as to potentialities of wet season. Nevertheless, I now am arrived at understanding of how Britain's wave-ruling seas take naturally to aqueous element, to which they are indubitably insured from previous infancy.

I believe I can almost appreciate how a gentleman from such a sunny clime as India must feel as he looks at the leaden clouds and breathes the smoky humidity of London.

A Surprise for the Shah.

The Shah of Persia has had his holiday in England, and has gone back home again to get warmed up and dried out. He originally wanted to come to London to attend the coronation, but when he learned that it was against the rules of the game for a head that had already been crowned to be present at the ceremony, he reluctantly postponed his visit. To make up for this disappointment, however, the English spread themselves to show him a good time and he was hobnobbing with royalty all the time he was here. They took him to the theaters where who galleries were curtained off and elaborately decorated for his and their pleasure and comfort; and the police were paraded, the guard turned out, the barracks inspected, the arsenal visited and what not to make the Son of the Sun enjoy himself.

One night he got to the Hippodrome too late to see the moving pictures of his arrival in London, and he was so disappointed that a little surprise was arranged for him. One morning the royal pasha, "Hoh," et al., took his Persian majesty, via Charing Cross station, down to Woolwich to inspect the arsenal and see the artillery on parade. The party got back about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and went direct to the Marlborough House, the Prince of Wales's flat in that street. The first thing that was shown the Shah when he got there was a moving picture of the coronation, the first coronation of one moving picture machine, he declared that although he had seen the coronation of his special brand, on the spot. Which goes to show how admirably and profitably business and pleasure may be combined when the matter is judiciously handled.

The telegraph comments on this expedition work as being equal to "Yankee smariness," which shows that the English have some aptitude and appreciation.

Thoughts on Lobsters.

At home, of course, one is inclined to view a "lobster" with more derision than suspicion; but here I am inclined to look askance at the crustaceans. I have seen thousands of lobsters in the fish "shops," but they are all of that brilliant scarlet color that indicates rigor mortis. I have not seen one of that dull dark green color, with moving claws and antennae, which means so much to the epicure. Even the restaurant bills of fare in mentioning lobsters say nothing about a "broiled live" service, and I am just about convinced that there is not a live lobster in London outside Parliament and the government offices.

When I first got to London I thought there must be trouble going on all the time, and that the police were a busy people; but I have learned better now. The constant chorus of police whistles that I heard was not to call the police, but to call the police to the police. I asked two and two for a hansom. But I was still puzzled about it, so I made some inquiries of an American friend of mine who has been over here long enough to learn to act and almost to speak English. "But what do people do," I asked with some apprehension, "when they want a policeman in a hurry?"

"Oh," he replied with the indulgent smile of One Who Knows All About It, "When he speaks to One Who Does It," they notify Scotland Yard by mail."

LITTLE STORIES OF DAILY LIFE

John Rader, the big policeman that guards the corner of Illinois and Washington streets, has had a vacation, and his diary tells him that he had a lovely time, but he blundered once.

He likes to fish. He found an agreeable friend and they went to a spot four miles north of Broad Ripple. They had fishing lines, divers species of bait, lots of edibles and a carload of enthusiasm.

When they reached the chosen spot for the day's haul, they loosed their lines, cut some poles from the trees nearby and all was in readiness. The bait was brought forth to be placed on the hooks—but alas! They had forgotten the hooks!

Social functions that have the appearance of the greatest simplicity are often the most work and expense. Even the expert giver of entertainments can not always estimate the expense account of a party that she attends, even if it happens to be her hobby to make an effort in this line. At one of the afternoon receptions given in the early summer, the house decoration was fruit blossoms. The hostess wished to have her rooms a bower of fragrance, and she engaged the most expensive florist in town to furnish the flowers and put them in place.

The drawingroom was a dream of beauty, and each and every guest exclaimed in unison of the appearance of the rooms. The woman with the "expense hobby" was there, and while she talked to the hostess she told her how beautiful she thought everything was, how much she delighted in such "simple" decorations, and went on to say: "You do just what I do in giving a party, and that is to do your own decorating and save the expense of a florist. Fruit blossoms you can get anywhere for the asking, and putting them up yourself, as you have, I don't suppose your party cost you half what mine did. You have just the good, an effect, and nothing spent for decorations."

The hostess gasped, as she thought of the bill that would be presented in the morning for her "simple" decorations, and had not the courage to tell her guest that this was one of the times that she had miscalculated expenses.

A crowd of about five hundred, a large per cent. of whom were men and boys, were cleverly "taken in" Saturday evening at an entertainment given in the Grand Lodge Hall of the I. O. O. F. by the Olive Branch, Daughters of Rebekah. The entertainment had been advertised as a "Bloomer Drill," which "steeple handsome ladies" would appear as disciples of Dr. Mary Walker. The prospect of so novel an entertainment drew a good house, and the statement on the program that the women would positively appear as advertised seemed assuring. The drill was the last thing on the program, and while cleverly executed failed to satisfy the men present. The reason lay in the fact that the "bloomers," instead of being wearing apparel, were simply long strands of paper flowers, with which each woman was tastefully decorated.

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"It has been a long time since we have been without Hood's Sarsaparilla. My father thinks he could not do without it. He has been troubled with rheumatism since he was a boy, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine he can take that will enable him to take his place in the field." Miss Ada Dorr, Sidney, Iowa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove the cause of rheumatism—no outward application can. Take them.

GIVE! GIVE!

We fear that many of our citizens do not appreciate the opportunity which now exists to secure the establishment in this city of an important educational institution. Wealthy men of the East stand ready to endow here a national technical institute for the education of boys in trades and industries, provided the people of this city show sufficient interest in the project to furnish a site and buildings. The Arsenal grounds and buildings would answer the immediate needs of such an institution most admirably.

These can be had of the Government at a fair valuation. All that is asked of our people is to raise a sufficient fund to make the purchase. Coupled with this project is the prospect that its successful completion will insure the establishment near the city of an army post.

If we consider only the commercial importance of these two things, we must see that they will be immensely valuable to the city. The post would mean the spending here of many hundreds of thousands of dollars for installation purposes, and the annual outlay for supplies and equipment of large sums, from which our merchants would gain profit. Similarly the school, if it would bring to the city hundreds of students and their teachers, whose joint expenditures would be a valuable asset to our commercial life.

Already many generous responses have been made to the committee's appeal for contributions. But, after all, comparatively few of our well-to-do people have given. The subject is of such vast importance to the city from every point of view that we ask all our readers once more to give it careful consideration and then to aid it according to their means. The time is short. The thing to do is to give and to give quickly.

A CANDIDATE AND A PLATFORM.

The Democrats of this district are to be congratulated on the work of their congressional convention. Their nominee for Congress, Mr. Jacob P. Dunn, is a man of high character and much ability. He has lived in this community a good many years, and he has the regard and respect of the people. He is a man of ideas—not always perhaps of the kind on the whole he is probably not further out of the way than most of us. It was never quite clear whether he was deeply interested in the cause of free silver, but that, aside, he is as good a Democrat as anyone. He has always been interested in politics in a broad way, and has rendered important service to the public, especially in the cause of better government and reform in our tax laws. He has, too, made his mark in literature, his history of Indiana being both an interesting and valuable book.

We have spoken of free silver, but only because of the association of Mr. Dunn's name with it in the past, for the issue is dead as far, at least, as this district is concerned. There is no mention of Bryan, of silver, or of the Kansas city platform in the resolutions adopted Saturday. The convention declared that "the branch-banking and asset-currency project, of which Representative Overstreet has been the conspicuous champion for the past five years," is the only financial peril ahead of us, and that "there is no other financial issue before the people of this district." There is no denunciation of the gold standard, no shouting about the "crime of '73," no demand for inflation, no suggestion of discrimination against silver, and not a word about "the money of the constitution."

The convention denounced trusts, especially in their political aspects, declared that they "are extorting the vast profits" which they use for corrupt purposes, "from the American people, chiefly by means of tariff taxes," and selling more cheaply to foreigners than to our own people, and placed special emphasis on the arrangements of the trusts with the railroads, "for discriminations in freight rates." Indeed, a Republican Congress defeated reciprocity with Cuba "at the dictation of the trusts." The Republican party is condemned for refusing to give the Interstate Commerce Commission increased powers.

The ship subsidy bill is denounced and Senators Fairbanks and Devoe are condemned for having voted for it. The convention protested against "the dangerous and un-American theory that there is, or can be, any territory under the Government of the United States to which the constitution does not extend and in which the officials of the United States can exercise power unrestrained and uncontrolled by the constitution." The Federal courts are criticized for abusing their powers in granting injunctions, and Congress in general and Mr. Overstreet in particular are denounced for refusing to heed the demand of the laboring men for legislation, limiting the powers of the Federal courts to grant injunctions. Altogether the platform is a fair statement of Democratic principles as they are now understood by the more conservative and at the same time more progressive members of the party in this district.

GERMANY AND HAITI.

There is no one who seems to be in a position to object to the destruction by a German cruiser of the gunboat Crete-A-Pierrot, which was controlled by the revolutionary party in Haiti. The provisional government of the island can have no quarrel with Germany for the act, for the destroyed ship belonged to its enemies. Those controlling the boat can not object, for they have no diplomatic or political status. As for our Government, it is in no way concerned. Of course, there is a question as to whether Admiral Killick, the commander of the Crete-A-Pierrot, was not within his rights in stopping the German merchantman and taking arms out of her that were intended for the provisional government. The seizure was made within the three-mile limit, and so in Haitian waters. Our Government, acting through Commander McCrea, had refused to recognize Killick's right to search foreign ships, or to interfere with foreign commerce. But it had not, so it is said, denied his right to operate within Haitian waters. Yet even so, if Germany's act was an offense at all, it was an offense against the government of Haiti, as it was an act of war within the limits of her sovereignty. But it is an act to which the Haitian government, of course, will not object.

As far as we are concerned, there is not the shadow of an issue between us and the Germans. We may think that the act was rather high-handed, though it goes only a little beyond the attitude assumed by McCrea—but even so it does not affect us in any way. Haiti is not American territory, nor is it under an American protectorate. Even our insistence that there shall be no acquisition of territory in Haiti by a European power, is not the result of any claim of a protectorate over the island. That is a position that has been assumed by the government of Haiti, but for our own benefit and advantage. And surely the destruction of the insurgent warship, which had many of the characteristics of a pirate, does not infringe the Monroe doctrine or affect in an unfavorable way any of our interests. All that we insist on is that there shall be no acquisition of territory by European powers on this hemisphere.

THE PRESIDENT'S PERFORMANCE. With all due respect to the President, one can not help but wonder if he thinks anything can come of the copy-book counsel that he continues to give concerning trusts. One may agree with all he says about Babylon, Nineveh and Mesopotamia, as well as Wheeling, W. Va., yet in earnest must feel constrained to ask, what has the President's long review of history done to and through modern industrial development, and his comparison of the tactics of attempting to dam the Mississippi with an attempt to regulate the trusts by any means but a constitutional amendment, which he points out is a patient process stretching through the years, go to do with relieving the American people from exactions on the part of these corporations that shall meantime be protected from world conditions and competition? There is the place to touch the button, and touching that place the President carefully falls even to suggest as a possible remedy the "renewing winter."

Frankly, the President talks like an orator at "junior exhibition"—Thebes, Greece, Rome, Vasco da Gama, "right on down." The President is making no contribution to present demands by this sort of oratory. There are certain great corporations, about whose trust character there is no dispute, that are enabled to make their exactions on the American people because they are protected from outside competition by a tariff that gives them a monopoly. The nearest approach that the President makes to dealing with this condition is by an amendment to the constitution of the United States. Does he not know that everybody that thinks of his utterances at all is laughing at that? There is one plain and simple thing to be urged, and if the President wants to see how it will hit, let him urge it, namely: A reduction of outside competition by a tariff that gives them a monopoly. After the private letter nothing affords one so vivid an impression of a past epoch as an old newspaper. It gives us an instantaneous photograph, so to say, of the time and society of its day of publication. Everything in it becomes of interest, and of nothing more so than the advertisements. The Baltimore American the other day celebrated its 125th birthday by reproducing in fac-simile its first issue, bearing date August 20, 1774. How far away that seems—before the revolutionary war! The paper was then styled the Maryland Journal and the Baltimore Advertiser. Under its title it describes itself as "Containing the freshest Advice from Foreign and Domestic," and above the date line it bears in Latin a quotation from Horace to the effect that by mingling the pleasant with the useful one carries every point in delighting and admonishing the reader. What an old world flavor it all has!

The paper itself is a folio, smaller than a single page of The News folded, containing three wide columns to the page. The editor's salutatory is interesting for many reasons. In the first place it apologizes for delay in the publication of the first issue. Was ever new paper published without this apology? Even as it was the editor had not completed arrangements for a special post rider from Philadelphia, who was "to set out from that place early on Monday Morning, and to arrive here on Tuesday Evening" to bring "the Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and sometimes in British and Irish Papers." In order that he might go to press "with the freshest advices," Verily, the notion of what constitutes fresh advices has changed since those leisurely days! In another part of the paper the editor advertises for "an active, faithful man who can write a tolerable hand" that would "be willing to undertake the service [of post rider] immediately."

The editor then proceeds to explain the kind of paper he proposed to print. First—"The Paper" shall contain not only the Public News, which I shall collect and compile with the greatest care, but also the Anecdotes of that Sort. I will supply the Room with such moral Pieces, from the best Writers, as will conduce most to inculcate good Principles and humane Behaviour; and now and then with Pieces of Wit and Humour, that tend both to amuse and instruct.

Second—"That I shall always publish with Pleasure whatever is sent me in Favour of Liberty and the Rights of Mankind, provided the Language be decent, and compatible with good Government; but I am resolved that my Paper shall be FREE and NO PARTY."

Not a bad program for a paper in any age of the world! The contents of the paper are not of an exhilarating character. It contains less real news than is found in a single column of this paper. The first page is given up to a reprint of an open letter from a Bishop to the Earl of Bellomont, who had recently fought a duel, seeking to show the folly of duelling in defense of "honour." Of newspapers the paper has only fragmentary items. The latest English advice heart date of June 17, the latest from New York of August 12. One interesting item is that "within this fortnight three thousand five hundred passengers have arrived at Philadelphia from Ireland"—reminding us of the large immigration from the old sod in the years preceding the revolutionary war. Doubtless many a Kelly, Burke and Shea of those thirty-five hundred were thirty years later in the Continental armies.

But the most interesting thing in this paper to us of to-day are the advertisements. A commission and insurance broker announces that "he has now for sale a Pocket of good Hops, a ten-inch New Cable—and wants to buy a Negro Girl, about 12 years old." Another man offers ten pounds reward for the return of his runaway "Negro Prince, a tall slim fellow; has several marks in his forehead. Another advertises that there had "strayed from town six Wagon HORSES and a Servant Man named Wallace, the property of Leigh Master, Esq." A handsome reward is offered for their return. And note this dignified announcement: "DANIEL GRANT, Who lately kept tavern at the Sign of the Duck near Philadelphia, Begs leave to inform the Public that he has opened an Inn and Tavern at the Sign of the Fountain, in that large and commodious house, lately built by Mr. Foraker, and that he is desirous of returning his old friends and acquaintances to the accommodation of Gentlemen, their servants, and horses in the best manner, and those who please to favour him with their custom, may be assured of his best endeavors to merit their approbation: He is desirous of returning his acknowledgments to the Gentlemen who did him the honour to frequent his former house, and as it shall ever be his study to do the best for his customers for nothing in this world, when they have worn themselves out in the service of the State." Either Mr. Kittinger must modify his language, or the would-be beneficiaries of the proposed pension rather than be listed as "old duifers" and "old moids."

When the loss of the great coal strike is figured up, too much can be said to be reckoned as falling to the operators. Prices have advanced, and they had a little coal on hand.

He who gives quickly gives twice, but do not make your checks for the technical institute less for that reason.

Availing New York paper writes with evident relish of the number of sons in that city that are in business with their fathers, and who hold out the pleasing prospect for the "renewing winter" of public readings "from the most eminent English authors," with lectures "on the necessity, advantage, beauty and propriety of a just vocal expression, wherein the use and elegance of accent, quantity, emphasis, and cadence, will be illustrated." Or perhaps we might hobbob with David Evans, clock and watchmaker, who makes watches "as good and equal in quality to any imported," and who "engages to return the money for repaired or new work, in case they should not perform," or with Christopher Hughes, the goldsmith, who offers everything in silver, gold and jewels (genuine and paste), including "Macaroni paste buckles," "shagreen watches," "pinch-back seals" and "marasite necklaces."

However, one lingers longest over an advertisement on the last page dated "Mount Vernon in Virginia, July 15, 1774," and signed "George Washington." It tells of 20,000 acres of land "on the Ohio and Great Kanawha," for which the advertiser had obtained patents, and which he proposed "to divide into any sized tenements that may be desired, and lease them upon moderate terms." Anyone "inclined to settle on these lands" could get full information "by applying to the subscriber near Alexandria." No lands could "exceed them in luxuriance of soil or convenience of situation." "And it may not be amiss further to observe that if the scheme for establishing a new government on the Ohio in the manner therein set forth, should ever be effected, these lands must be among the most valuable lands in it, not only on account of the goodness of soil, and the other advantages above enumerated, but from their contiguity to the seat of government, which more than probable will be fixed at the mouth of the Great Kanawha."

Thus in Baltimore town barely three years before Jefferson penned the great Declaration and the troubled times began of the travail of a new system of government, the current of life flowed gently and leisurely along. By special enterprise people knew Thursday what had happened Monday at Philadelphia. At the shops of the little city men could have their wants supplied as the needs of the day demanded. A paper whose pleasure it would be to print whatever was sent it "in Favour of Liberty and the Rights of Mankind" was established; and a gentleman farmer of Virginia, whose name was never to be heard of again, was seeking tenants for his new lands on the far-off Ohio.

The frost stage is passed and there is little danger of a revival of Populism. There has never been a time since the adoption of the city charter when the gamblers and saloon keepers violated the law with greater impunity. But at any rate there was no comfort in the local Democratic convention of Saturday for Mr. Bryan.

The question of the negro's status raised by local advocacy of "driving him out" of his political rights, has aroused great interest and called forth much comment, as the communications in The News have shown. Other communications on the same subject continue to come in, but as those printed have covered most if not all phases of the subject we shall have to cease the discussion of it in this way.

The Mores have rejected our friendly overtures, Guernsey what we shall have to do to the Mores.

Poor, old Chicago! Statistic, recently compiled, show that during the last twenty years New York city had 5,690 strikes, while Chicago had only 1,737. Chicago might send for 'Gene Debs at once and start up something.

The fear of typhoid fever this fall is widespread and well founded. It prevails in city and country. The disease is so contagious that it is probable that we shall be more negligent if we fall to do what we know ought to be done to prevent it. An illustration is afforded by comparative results in Kenwood, a suburb of Chicago, and the "ghetto," of the same city. In the former there have been two deaths from typhoid fever; in the latter, two hundred. Chicago authorities seem to hold that the difference is not one merely of pure drinking water, and agree that this is only one thing to be looked to. There must be care not only that drinking water is free from germs, which can be assured by boiling it, but that general hygienic precautions must also be taken. The time is approaching when there should be a thorough cleaning of all premises, particularly cellars, drains, out-houses, alleys and places generally where there is little light and air.

An unusually low tax levy is to be followed by an unusually high tax levy. The problem of taxation follows the law of averages.

"We denounce," "We condemn," "We protest against!" "We deplore"—these are the phrases that recur in the Democratic platform of Saturday. But what do YOU propose to do? That is what the voters would like to know before they turn to you. Mere opposition is not enough. There must be a positive policy as well.

Terre Haute Republicans want Senator Foraker to open the campaign for them. They probably wanted it opened wide. Let it not be forgotten that the anti-trust clique monopolists simply refuse to discuss the situation with anyone. They do not even discuss it with their own position in the controversy is. They refuse to entertain the proposition of arbitration. They are bound to crush the union at whatever cost to themselves, the men and the general public.

Both the miners and the operators are said to be satisfied with the situation. The third party interested, the consumer, is not.

State Senator Kittinger is drafting a bill for presentation to the next General Assembly, looking to pensioning school teachers worn out in the service. In emphasizing its needs, the Senator is quoted as saying: "Just think of the old duifers and the old moids who are good for nothing in this world, when they have worn themselves out in the service of the State." Either Mr. Kittinger must modify his language, or the would-be beneficiaries of the proposed pension rather than be listed as "old duifers" and "old moids."

When the loss of the great coal strike is figured up, too much can be said to be reckoned as falling to the operators. Prices have advanced, and they had a little coal on hand.

He who gives quickly gives twice, but do not make your checks for the technical institute less for that reason.

Availing New York paper writes with evident relish of the number of sons in that city that are in business with their fathers, and who hold out the pleasing prospect for the "renewing winter" of public readings "from the most eminent English authors," with lectures "on the necessity, advantage, beauty and propriety of a just vocal expression, wherein the use and elegance of accent, quantity, emphasis, and cadence, will be illustrated." Or perhaps we might hobbob with David Evans, clock and watchmaker, who makes watches "as good and equal in quality to any imported," and who "engages to return the money for repaired or new work, in case they should not perform," or with Christopher Hughes, the goldsmith, who offers everything in silver, gold and jewels (genuine and paste), including "Macaroni paste buckles," "shagreen watches," "pinch-back seals" and "marasite necklaces."

However, one lingers longest over an advertisement on the last page dated "Mount Vernon in Virginia, July 15, 1774," and signed "George Washington." It tells of 20,000 acres of land "on the Ohio and Great Kanawha," for which the advertiser had obtained patents, and which he proposed "to divide into any sized tenements that may be desired, and lease them upon moderate terms." Anyone "inclined to settle on these lands" could get full information "by applying to the subscriber near Alexandria." No lands could "exceed them in luxuriance of soil or convenience of situation." "And it may not be amiss further to observe that if the scheme for establishing a new government on the Ohio in the manner therein set forth, should ever be effected, these lands must be among the most valuable lands in it, not only on account of the goodness of soil, and the other advantages above enumerated, but from their contiguity to the seat of government, which more than probable will be fixed at the mouth of the Great Kanawha."

The Welcome.

Come in the evening or come in the morning.
Come when you're looked for, or come without warning.
Kisses and welcomes you'll find here before you, And the welcome you come here, the more I'll adore you!

Light is my heart since the day we were Red in my cheek that they told me was blighted:
The green of the trees looks far greener than ever, And the sunbeams are singing: "True lovers don't sever!"

I'll pull you sweet flowers, to wear if you like them:
Or, after you've kissed them, they'll lie on my bloom.
I'll reach from the mountain its breeze to you, And I'll tell you my fancy a tale that won't tire you.

O your steps like the rain to the summer-land:
Or saunter and shield to a knight without armor; I'll sing you sweet songs till the stars turn to you. Then, wandering, I'll wish you in silence to love me.

We'll look through the trees at the cliff and the river:
We'll tread round the path on the track of the fairy.
We'll sit on the stars, and then we'll list to the river.
Till you ask of your darling what gift you can give her.

O she'll whisper you, "Love, as unchangeably true,
And when in secret, most tenderly true,
Till the daylight of heaven above us shall quiver,
As our souls flow in one down Eternity's river."

So come in the evening, or come in the morning.
Come when you're looked for, or come without warning.
Kisses and welcomes you'll find here before you, And the welcome you come here, the more I'll adore you!

GERMAN GUNBOAT
SINKS CRETE-A-PIERROTTHE PANTHER RESENTS AN ACT OF PIRACY.

FIRM'S BOAT PERFORATED

Sent to the Bottom in the Harbor of Gonaives After the Crew Had Been Taken Off.

CAPE HAITIEN, Haiti, September 8.—The gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot, which was in the service of the Firmin party, was sunk at the entrance of the harbor of Gonaives by the German gunboat Panther. The crew of the Crete-a-Pierrot left her before she went down. The Panther left Port-au-Prince Saturday morning at 2 o'clock after having cleared for action, in search of the Crete-a-Pierrot. The Panther found the Crete-a-Pierrot in the harbor of Gonaives and the commander of the German gunboat informed Admiral Killick, on the Crete-a-Pierrot, that he must remove his crew and surrender his vessel on five minutes.

Admiral Killick asked that this time be extended to fifteen minutes. This request was granted on the condition that the arms and ammunition on board the Crete-a-Pierrot should be abandoned by the crew left her.

The crew of the Crete-a-Pierrot left the vessel amid great disorder. At the end of fifteen minutes the Panther sent a small boat carrying an officer and twenty sailors, who were to take possession of the Firmin gunboat.

When these men had arrived at the point thirty yards from the Crete-a-Pierrot flames were seen to break out on board of her. She had been fired by the Panther. The Panther then fired on the Crete-a-Pierrot until she was completely disabled. Thirty shots, it was said, were fired. There is much feeling against the Firminists, and their cause is considered to be a bad one. Soldiers are leaving Port-au-Prince to attack St. Marc.

An Act of Piracy.
The German steamer Markomannia, Captain Nansen, belonging to the Hamburg-American Packet Company, having on board arms and ammunition sent by the provisional government to Cape Haiti, was stopped, September 2, by the Crete-a-Pierrot at the entrance to the harbor of Cape Haiti, and an armed force sent on board the steamer. The gunboat took possession of the war munitions, in spite of the protestations of Captain Nansen and the German consul.

The seizure of the Markomannia was characterized by the most flagrant piracy. The Crete-a-Pierrot was a steel, screw vessel of 500 tons displacement. She was armed with one 4.3-inch gun, one 4.1-inch, four 3.9-inch, and four 3.7-inch guns, and four Nordenfiet machine guns. She was formerly in the service of the Haitian government.

The Panther is a steel cruising vessel of 27 tons. She was built at Dantzig in 1891 and is 26 feet long. She is armed with eight 4.4-inch quick firing guns, six 1.4-inch and two machine guns. Captain Pantier left Germany July 20, for the Caribbean sea.

Captain Scherer, the newly appointed German commander of the Crete-a-Pierrot, had an audience with Emperor William to receive special instructions before starting on his post on the Panther.

NOT OUR BUSINESS.
Washington is Not Concerned Over the Lost Gunboat.

WASHINGTON, September 8.—Mr. Powell, the United States minister to Haiti, reported promptly from Port-au-Prince to the State Department the sinking of the Haitian gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot by the German gunboat Panther.

The minister promised to make an extended report by mail.

The Navy Department was also informed of the event in the following dispatch, received from the minister to Haiti in command of the United States Cruiser Cincinnati, at Port-au-Prince:

"German gunboat Panther (Crete-a-Pierrot) at Gonaives. Crew escaped. The Panther returned to Port-au-Prince."

As matters stand, there is nothing to be done by the State Department at this juncture. The official statement of the view that the incident was one between the German and the Haitian governments, and that it was not our business. No American interests have been affected, and as the United States has not recognized the revolutionary government in Haiti, there is no one to make complaint to this government.

The termination of Killick's career may have a salutary effect, not only in Haiti, but also in South American countries, where heretofore the slightest revolutionary disturbance has been made the pretext for severe and unjust interference with foreign merchant vessels.

HAITI DOES NOT CARE.
Official Account of the Sinking of the Gunboat.

BERLIN, September 8.—The German Foreign Office informs the Associated Press that the German government has communicated to Germany that Haiti regarded the Firmin gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot as a pirate, and that the interests of Haiti were not touched by the sinking of the German gunboat Panther in sinking the Crete-a-Pierrot at the entrance of the harbor of Gonaives.

The official account of the sinking of the Crete-a-Pierrot is as follows: "The Panther on Saturday morning destroyed the Haitian gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot, before she had reached the Crete-a-Pierrot fleet ashore. There were no losses on board the Panther, which remained in the harbor of Gonaives, and then returned to Port-au-Prince. Gonaives is in the hands of the rebels."

BERTI STARVED OUT.
Colombian Insurgents Victorious at Agua Dulce.

PANAMA, Colombia, September 8.—The governor-general, Morales Berti, who has been besieged by the insurgent forces under General Herrera at Agua Dulce, probably has been defeated. The government gunboats returned here Saturday night from an exploring expedition. Officers of the expedition report having landed at Yeguala, where the insurgent garrison was defeated after a slight skirmish. A few insurgent prisoners were captured, and it is from these that the governor-general has learned of the defeat at Agua Dulce.

General Berti had been besieged since July 28. The troops of his command must have suffered terribly from lack of supplies during the long days of the siege, and it is said they were compelled to eat horseflesh.

Fatal Result of Gold Plunge.
RICHMOND, Ind., September 8.—Red Dugan, age twenty-five, one of the best known young men of Richmond, died this morning of paralysis, which resulted from a gold plunge in a bathtub while under the influence of Dr. G. B. Reid, New York, the triplane magnate.

Tragedy at Boston.
BOSTON, September 8.—John C. Lenehan was shot in the abdomen during a quarrel last night, by his son-in-law, James C. Duane, a prominent business man in this city and Brooklyn, and died today. The shooting is said to have been the outcome of a series of family quarrels.

GAS SUITS TO BE PUSHED.

Muncie Cases to be Filed in the Circuit Court.

(Special to The Indianapolis News.)
MUNCIE, Ind., September 8.—Whether or not the city comes to terms with the gas companies as to the rates that shall be charged this winter, the 1,300 cases brought against the companies for damages on account of gas shortages in previous winters will be pushed at once. Five hundred cases, all of which were filed in judgment of the peace courts, will be withdrawn and filed in the Circuit Court.

One case was tried in a justice's court and it was decided in favor of the companies. This will be appealed. About $100,000 is involved in the suits. Lawyers for the companies say that it is almost impossible to get an unprejudiced justice jury.

To-night the ordinance allowing the gas companies to charge 25 cents a thousand will be up for passage by the City Council, but it is said its defeat is assured.

PRESIDENT HAS JOINED THE RAILROADS.

he said, he got a number of railroad men. Of course, the first requisite was that a man should know how to ride and how to shoot. Giving them these two qualities, he found there was no better group from which soldiers could be drawn than railroad men.

The President said he hoped and believed that the danger of war would be less in the future than it has in the past. At the same time, he said, the conditions of the world have changed so much that we are, as a people, still awaiting the day when we will be able to solve them. The President referred to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

For Organized Labor.
"I believe emphatically," he said, "in organized labor. The worth of an organization," he continued, "depends upon its being handled with the courage, the skill, the wisdom, the spirit of self-sacrifice, and the restraint which I am glad to be able to say your brotherhood has shown."

The President spoke of the necessity of work, of duty, of the creature which does not work, he said, "at which ever end of the stick, but we must be able to work well and secure the successful American."

Discussing the benefits which have grown out of the organization of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the President said the brotherhood does much for all men, but he firmly believed that the individual freeman, and the growth of the brotherhood, had been more, not less, the result of the organization.

"A great deal can be accomplished," he said, "by working each for all and all for each, but we must be able to work well and secure the successful American."

Qualities of Courage.
"I feel that organizations like yours have a tonic effect upon the whole body politic. It is a good thing that there should be a large body of our fellow citizens who exercise the old virtues of courage, of duty, of self-sacrifice, and of the willingness to meet danger at need and that there should be a profession whose members must, year in and year out, display these qualities. I hope to see all our people develop the softer gentler virtues to an ever-increasing degree but I hope never to see them lose the sterner virtues that make them men."

The President's address was a problem of producing good men and women. All the organizations in the world work for the development of the individual, and he was necessary to the character that is composed of honesty, of courage and of hard common sense.

Kentucky's Inscription.
The President took of his trip over the battlefield of Shiloh, and drew a lesson of the heroism shown by the armies of the North and South.

He read the inscription on the monument raised by Kentucky as follows: "As we are united in life and they are united in death, let one monument perpetuate their deeds and one people, forgetful of all asperities, forever holding in grateful remembrance all the glories of that terrible conflict which made all men free and our country a great republic."

"That is a good sentiment," said the President, "and we can all stand by it. And, oh, my friends, that sentiment has been the underlying spirit of our country, and therefore I believe that the chief thing necessary to us is that we should work together as if they should be united in death, and that we should know the things that divide us are superficial, are unimportant, and that we and our country must be knit together into one indivisible mass by common Americanhood."

As the President concluded he was loudly cheered.

The presidential train left at 1:30 over the Southern railway for Knoxville.

Visits the Battlefield.
President Roosevelt arrived here at 8:30 yesterday morning. A large crowd welcomed him at the station.

A committee composed of Governor McMillin, Mayor A. W. Crambliss, Congressman John A. Moon, Gen. H. V. Boynton, Gen. A. P. Stewart and Capt. J. P. Smart, members of the Chickamauga Park Commission, met the President at the station.

The President and his party entered the city. Trolley cars were in waiting and after the formal greeting was over, they started for the Chickamauga battlefield.

After inspecting the battlefield, the President stopped at the camping grounds of the regiment and reviewed the regiment. He then went to the headquarters of the army, under the command of Colonel Baldwin, which acted as the President's escort through the park.

The President, with General Desha, mounted on horses, and after the other members of the party had entered carriages, the drive through the park began.

The President started his horse at a sharp trot, and for a mile and a half led the regiment in a merry chase over the battlefield. The pace was so hot that several of the troopers, who were not used to the pace, called to the ambulance corps into service.

IS WRESTLING A GAME?
That is the question the Supreme Court is asked to decide.

Is a wrestling game a game? An appeal filed by Secret & Walz, the Superior court, today, from Blackford county, deal with that question. The glassblowers and oil men of Hartford City got up a wrestling match in the opera house at Hartford City last April. Hector Desha, one of the contestants, put up on one side. It is alleged a man named Smith was to be the other wrestler, but when the match was over and Desha went down, it was discovered that Smith was not a man named Smith, but a man named Murbarger.

Suit was brought by Desha against Secret & Walz, to recover $100 on the match. James McCormick, another of the contestants, was also in the match. The result of the match was a draw. The court held that a wrestling match is not a game, and that the money paid for the match was not a prize.

REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN.

Things will Begin to Hum About October 1.

(Special to The Indianapolis News.)
NEW YORK, September 8.—"The campaign thus far has been very quiet," said Secretary James Overstreet, of the Republican congressional committee, Congressmen from the Indianapolis district, today.

"The real work of the year has not yet begun. Probably the headquarters will be quiet until the middle of October, or until the first days of October."

"The committee is making no claims or estimates, nor is it making any estimates. It is submitting to an interview on the outlook, and will not do so, and nobody is authorized to speak for us. Toward the latter part of October Mr. Babcock, the chairman of the committee, will make a formal address to the country regarding the outlook from our point of view, but even this will probably not go largely into detail."

The committee has been considerably annoyed over late reports, circulated by those who are anxious to injure the Republican cause, if possible. The first of these purported to be a statement from Mr. Babcock, circumstantial and going into minute detail, giving a list of the districts by States, which the Republicans hope to carry in November.

As soon as the mails could bring the word, letters of inquiry were sent to Mr. Babcock, stating which Mr. Babcock was, presumably, made concessions to the Democrats.

One politician from Indiana said: "Will Mr. Babcock be so kind as to tell me the number of the districts in this State which he thinks the Democrats will carry in the future? We are anxious to confine these statements to us, so far as our State is concerned, and not publish them in broadsheet for the comfort of the enemy?"

Letters were written to all inquirers that the published report was a fake, and that neither Mr. Babcock nor any member of the committee had made any statement regarding the districts which he expected the Republicans would carry, and that the report was a fabrication.

The Indiana Anti-Saloon League
Prominent in the Latest Crusade.

"One hundred fewer saloons are licensed to do business in Indiana than last month. The Indiana Anti-Saloon League announced a month ago that it had plans to close one hundred saloons by remonstrance, every month for one year, and the reports that we are now compiling, from different parts of the State indicate that we will pass the one hundred mark in the first month of the work."

This announcement was made to-day by the Rev. E. G. Saunders, who is in charge of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League. He said that the league had sent every county in the State, when the county commissioners met this month, they found a pile of saloon license remonstrances to act on—the result of the anti-saloon crusade.

Reports that have already reached the office of the State secretary account for over fifty victorious remonstrances, and from newspapers and other sources no news has been received that any of the applications have been defeated. In many cases, the saloon license has not been granted, and in some cases, the saloon license has been granted, but the saloon has been closed.

TORTURED FOR LOVE OF PRINCESS LOUISE.

LIEUT. KEGLEVICH TELLS OF HIS SUFFERING IN PRISON.

HE WILL SEEK FOR REDRESS

Eloped with the Oldest Daughter of King Leopold, Who Insisted on Stern Punishment.

PARIS, September 8.—The pardon just granted to Lieutenant Matias Keglevich, who eloped with Princess Louise of Coburg, the eldest daughter of the King of the Belgians, was brought about, it is thought here, by the ceaseless agitation of Frenchmen in his behalf. The Emperor of Austria, it was understood always thought the lovers somewhat excusable, in view of the ill treatment of the princess by her husband, but King Leopold sternly insisted on their punishment. Hence the long incarceration of both Louise under pretext of insanity, the lieutenant after a farcical trial on the preposterous charge of forgery.

Says He was Tortured.

Keglevich was interviewed in Vienna as soon as he was liberated, and told the correspondent of the Paris Journal that he had been tortured in his fortress prison under the personal supervision of the princess's husband, until a Hungarian deputy, M. Dascynski, voicing the humane sentiments of international sympathizers, openly demanded in the Diet an investigation into what he styled "low, disgraceful, barbaric processes of revenge."

Still Loves Princess.

The lieutenant declares that he still loves Princess Louise; that he has constantly refused to promise not to see her if set at liberty, as he considers it his duty to devote his life to atoning for the sufferings of the woman who sacrificed everything to her love for him, and that he will seek legal redress for his military degradation and imprisonment for alleged forgery. He calls himself the "Hungarian Driftnet."

Princess Louise is free now, too, and is living closely guarded in Hamburg. It is believed that the lieutenant, who left Vienna yesterday, will find it impossible to approach the princess.

They Were There.

"Are the mosquitoes thick where you've been this summer?" "Well, rather. Why, a half hour's snooze in a hammock is enough to make you think you've been rolling in poison ivy."

THE BURGLAR SMILED AT HIS PRETTY CAPTOR

THE WOMAN BLUSHED WHEN PRAISED BY MAGISTRATE.

CAPTURED A HOUSE-BREAKER

She Grappled with the Man, Put Him to Flight, and Finally Brought the Police to Arrest Him.

NEW YORK, September 8.—"I hadn't time to think of being frightened. I was fighting for my life." This is Mrs. Clara Gehm's explanation, given with a shy little laugh, of an act which, for sheer pluck, has rarely been equaled in the big city.

A girl in years—Mrs. Gehm is just past twenty—and a child in figure (her height is just five feet two inches), she put a burglar to flight and then aided in his capture.

Mrs. Gehm, only recently married, lives in a three-room flat in the rear of the first floor of No. 223 East Sixty-third street. Her husband, George Gehm, is in the employ of the Central Brewing Company.

The little bride, hastening down-stairs on an errand, had shut and locked the door. In passing through the hall she brushed against a man, and, turning to apologize, noticed that he had only one arm.

Startled Her.

"His face startled me. I almost screamed," said Mrs. Gehm. "Some time later, the incident forgotten, she mounted the stairs. As she laid her hand upon the handle of her door she became aware that it was unlocked, but that somebody from within was holding it shut.

With sudden force she threw herself against the door. It yielded slightly, and before the man inside could recover his advantage she thrust her foot into the aperture. That foot wears a No. 2, but it served the purpose. Then round the corner of the door came the same repulsive face she had seen in the hall, as with a muttered oath the burglar swung his one arm about and made at her throat. He was heavily built and powerful, but the little woman sprang at him and wound her arms about his neck.

He choked and struck me again and again, but I shut my teeth and held on as long as I could," said Mrs. Gehm. "Back and forth they struggled, but her clutch only grew the tighter. After what seemed an age the man whirled around with such sudden violence that she was unbalanced, but she clung to him and he fell back. She dashed for the stairs and made for the roof was the work of an instant. The burglar shrieked for help as she rushed after him.

Aroused a Tenant.

Those screams aroused a tenant named Roberts in the apartment immediately over her head. He gave chase and on the roof came up with the thief, who waved a revolver at him and threatened to shoot. The weapon had been taken from the burglar home and was unbalanced, but Roberts, ignorant of this, fled down the stairs.

Meantime others in the building had heard the outcry and detective Sergeant Brady and Moore, who were passing, raced to the roof and caught the burglar just as he was breaking through a skylight to descend through the next house.

At police headquarters he was identified as George Moore, twenty-seven years old, whose picture is No. 6226 in the rogues' gallery. His one arm caused him to be known as "Wing" Moore. He gathered together his clothing and jewelry in a corner of the Gehm apartment and was just ready for flight when the police came.

Mrs. Gehm's pretty face flushed with pleasure and her dark eyes were very bright yesterday when Magistrate Hogan, in the Yorkville Police Court, said, enthusiastically: "You are one of the pluckiest little women I ever heard of, and you deserve credit."

"Wing" Moore, who was held in $1,000 bail for trial, looked curiously at his small captor and grimly smiled.

AN EFFECTIVE HIGH NECK EVENING GOWN.

HIS CRACK JOB

BY JEANNETTE BENTON.

Occasionally the gov'ner did society. He seldom went into any but the best, because there he found the "smart" young women who emphasized their social standing by a minute accounts of their mistresses' doings. The gov'ner had often materially increased his bank account by those financial pointers.

One Tuesday night he dropped into Wiley's. It was sometimes a little mixed there—twenty-four coppers laid, and the tables one glisten of solid silver or cut glass. We are 't when it comes to solid silver.

"You must have the coin," the gov'ner remarked casually. "Oh, not special. It's weddin' presents. They're both got rich folks, an' they burst just as I need 'em. Scads of solid silver."

The gov'ner regarded her with beaming interest. "A gauzy butterfly like you oughtn't to wear such a thing. What's your push out there?" he inquired tenderly.

Miss Nellie tossed her head. "Just me an' him an' her an' the baby, an' he gone half the time."

"He's gone now, an' she thinks I'm there in bed. I am goin' to Mulhall's party to-morrow night, too."

"Suppose the crooks 'ud do the house, an' her alone?" he suggested. "Miss Nellie squealed. 'Mercy me! You don't think I'd fight 'em if I was there, do you? Oh, she's got a 'phone in her room. She could get help easy enough."

The gov'ner smiled. It was a leisurely matter to finish a job and get comfortably away after the business bell had called for help. It was surprising no one had got on to a dead end and shut job like that.

Three o'clock the next morning found him padding gently up the still half-lit street. Just ahead of him were the dim outlines of a large lawn heavily watered with rain.

He vaulted the fence and strode leisurely up through the trees. "Not even a bloomin' dog," he murmured pityingly. "Ten minutes later he walked quietly into the house and found his way to the hall. He generally found the hall first and radiated from there.

He had barely stepped in when a door on the upper floor opened sharply. "Nellie! Nellie!" called a frightened voice. "There is something dreadful the matter with the baby, and the telephone broke!"

The voice rose to a shriek of terror. There was a rush of muffled footsteps through the upper hall. The gov'ner looked sympathetically. "There's a dear! An' an' good until 5 o'clock," he murmured.

There was an instant's silence; then the voice broke out afresh in deeper terror. "Oh, she's dyin'—she's dyin'!"

The gov'ner scratched his head distractedly. He hated to see folks in trouble. "Baby! Baby!" the voice was heart-breaking. "Isn't there anybody to help me?"

In instant later he stood at the door of the lighted chamber. "Can I do anything for you, ma'am?" he inquired politely. "I heard you as I was passin'."

A woman knelt by the bed. She was very childlike-looking. She swept the half back from her face and regarded him with terror-stricken eyes.

"Please put her in," she half whispered. "I am afraid to lift her."

"Bliss!" murmured the gov'ner; then he stooped and lifted the tiny convulsed body into his arms. He felt it relax slightly in his hands as the water submerged it.

"Throw a blanket or something over to keep in the heat!" he commanded. "Then skin out, can't you, an' get some hotter water? Get a move on you, too."

She had already gone. The gov'ner, regarding the small face he was supporting above the blanket anxiously. It was a pinched, now and lay limply on his hand, small and pathetic.

"Such a little kid," he said softly—"such a bloomin' little kid!" The long lashes slowly lifted, and the dark eyes gazed into his slowly the purple lids closed again, and a tremor shook its body.

He swore softly. "Ain't she ever comin'?" This layout will freeze the kid in a blasted minute!" He gathered the baby up in the blanket and commenced to pace the floor, watching the tiny face with strained attention.

LIVES WITH HUSBAND AND DIVORCED HUSBAND

HOUSEHOLD THAT IS HAPPY UNDER STRANGE CONDITIONS.

TWO MEN SEEM CONTENTED

The Wife Makes No Complaint, and All Goes Well, Despite Break Made by Her Love.

[Special to The Indianapolis News.]

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., September 8.—There is a household a mile from Fontanet, a mining town in this county, which consists of two men and a woman, the last named being the divorced wife of one and wife of the other man. The four children by the first husband are also in the family. Moreover, it is a peaceful household.

Milton Allen, a farmer, who worked in the coal mines in winter, lived happily with his wife for fifteen years, until two years ago, when August Rash, a miner, became a boarder at the Allen home. Not long afterward Allen discovered that his wife was in love with Rash, and when the two men and Mrs. Allen discussed the matter it was agreed that the divorce be a divorce. A division of the property, consisting of a small farm, was made before the suit for divorce was filed. Allen was the defendant, and he purposely refrained from appearing, the divorce being granted by default.

Work the Farm Together.

Three days later Mrs. Allen and Rash were married and returned to the home, where Allen awaited them. The two men work the farm together, and it is a common sight to see them leading a farm wagon with each other's help. Mrs. Rash has borrowed money on her share of the farm and will build a home.

NAMED BY A LEGISLATURE.

Evangeline Heartz Davidson so Called by the Colorado Assembly.

Evangeline Heartz Davidson, the first child to be named by a legislative body, was christened at Salida, Colo., recently. The baby is the daughter of Representative J. A. Davidson, of Chaffee county, and the name of Mrs. Evangeline Heartz, member of the House from Arapahoe county, was given it in March last by

EVANGELINE HEARTZ DAVIDSON.

The General Assembly of Colorado. The child enjoys a further distinction in being the first baby in the land to be named for a woman legislator. Mrs. Heartz attended the christening ceremonies, and many of the sons who were present the day the child was named attended the christening and showered gifts at the little one's feet.

Stenographer Blundered.

[Yonkers Statesman.] Church—You know, French, who keeps the restaurant? Gotham—Oh, yes. Church—Well, he wants a new type-writer. Gotham—What's the matter with that good-looking one he had?

Church—Oh, the other day he told her to write and get the price of frogs' legs. Then he went down-stairs, the dollar in his hand.—Copyright.

To Amateur Photographers

THE News offers a prize of $10 for the best photograph made by an Indiana Amateur at some summer resort. Group pictures of individuals or pretty bits of scenery are preferred and the names of the persons in the picture and place taken must be written legibly. Besides the prize-winning picture, some of the others may be printed. The contest will close Sept. 15. Address all photographs and communications to Amateur Photograph Department, The News, Indianapolis.

IN THE NEWS AMATEUR PHOTO CONTEST.

ON BOARD THE GEORGIA, FROM MILWAUKEE TO MACKINAC.

WOMEN KEPT DOWN BY OHIO.

Buckeye State Charged with Crippling Fair Sex with Lunatics.

CLEVELAND, September 8.—The officers of the Ohio Woman's Suffrage Association have issued a call for the seventeenth annual convention to meet in Cleveland, October 7 and 8.

Attention is called to the facts that Australia has given nearly 30,000 women the right of suffrage; Maryland has admitted them to the practice of law, Massachusetts has placed them on an equality with men in the matter of guardianship of children, but Ohio, a great progressive commonwealth, still holds its intelligent women politically in the same class with minors, lunatics and criminals. Hence the convention.

The Rev. Olympia Brown, of Wisconsin; the Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, of Pennsylvania; and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, of New York, will be the star speakers of the occasion. The convention headquarters will be at the Colonial Hotel.

BUY GOWNS IN BERLIN.

American Women Make German City a Rival to Paris.

BERLIN, September 8.—Berlin is rapidly becoming a serious rival of Paris in the matter of dressmaking, as far as American custom is concerned. Several American ladies declare they prefer Berlin to Paris, because the prices are more moderate, while the styles and the quality of the goods have so much improved in recent years that even the most stylish women do not hesitate to patronize Berlin.

Girl models, speaking English and dressed in the fashion which American women admire, are now a feature of the dressmaking establishments here. The American business of one larger firm on Unter den Linden for the month of August amounted to $90,000.

ROUGH ON WORMS. Does the work, 25c.

A Gem, Unbeatable, Wells' Hair Tonic.

A Healing Wonder. No sore, no skin disease, humor or eruption, or itchy poison, so bad that Wells' "Miraculous Itch" powder will not cure. 25c.

Hair Turning Gray.

If you wish to gradually restore it to original color, black or brown, Wells' Hair Tonic (not a dye) is what you want. 50c and $1.00 bottles.

No Legs—No Horse.

No action, no speed, no life if the value of your $50 horse is reduced to $10, because of stale, bunched, tender, stiffened, sore or feverish legs and feet. Is it not well spent in a bottle of the great "Get There" remedy, which will make 10 gallons of leg wash and is a wonder? Get There and Try it. $2.00 at Druggists, Prepared by Express, E. R. WELLS, Chemist, Jersey City.

Quick Riddance of Ants and Roaches. Rough on Rats, though poisonous, is safely used, and is decidedly effective. For Roaches and Ants, mix a 25c box carefully and thoroughly with a pound of mashed, boiled potatoes, or with a half loaf of finely crumbled, dampened bread, or two pieces about their haunts. Do this two nights in succession. Keep children and pets away from it, sweep it up and destroy in fire, and your Cockroach trouble is all over.
